POWER RESERVOIR

The reservoir for the Penelec-Cleveland Electric Illuminating Seneca Power Plant sits like a giant dish high above the Kinzua Dam. The reservoir is 50 feet deep and covers an area of 100 acres. The wooded mountainside between the dam and reservoir has been penetrated by a tunnel through which water will be pumped to the top and then allowed to descend turning generators as it falls. Tests on the reservoir's holding capacity are scheduled for this October. The plant is expected to be in operation by July of 1969. The project is the work of the Hunkin-Conkey Construction Co. Inc., at a cost of approximately $40-million. It will generate 380,000 kilowatts of power. (Photo by Mahan; pilot, Beach)

Defense Sec. Clifford Plans Battlefield Talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Clark M. Clifford is going to Vietnam Saturday for battlefield talks in advance of an expected new enemy offensive.

It will be his first trip to the war area as defense chief.

Clifford said Thursday Gen.

Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and other high officials will accompany him for a war appraisal from the new commander, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams.

Clifford told a news conference that intelligence reports the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong have built up their strength to eight divisions or more, just below the Demilitarized Zone, as well as increased enemy activity around Saigon.

"So I believe we must anticipate the possibility of a new offensive on the part of enemy forces in July or possibly August with Gen. Wheeler and I will wish to talk this out in great detail with Gen. Abrams and his chief commanders in the field," he said.

Clifford said the level of combat has dropped some in the past few weeks and, "Some would look at this as possibly a hopeful sign."

Clifford said he believes "we must face the reality" of stepped-up enemy activity and the potential for new attacks.

He was less optimistic than South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu, who said Wednesday it might be possible to withdraw some U.S. troops from Vietnam late next year.

"In the absence of some development in Paris that would affect the presence or withdrawal of Americans in South Vietnam, I would be unwilling at this time to predict the withdrawal of any American troops in 1969," Clifford said.

Student Fees Increased At Colleges, Universities

HARRISBURG — Superintendent of Public Instruction David H. Kurtzman announced today that the boards of trustees of the 14 State colleges and universities have approved across-the-board increases in the fees for students.

The increases - recommended by Governor Shafer in his Budget Message this year - will become effective Sept. 1, 1968.

The collective action raises the basic fee for full-time Pennsylvania resident students for the academic year to $350 at all institutions. At the 13 State-owned colleges this past year the fee was $250. At Indiana University of Pennsylvania it was $280.

Other fees in the new schedule, with the past year's fees indicated in parentheses, are as follows:

- Full-time Pennsylvania resident students per semester - $175 ($125; $140 at Indiana);
- Part-time students, taking 11 or less credit hours, per credit hour - $15 ($12.50);
- Students taking extension courses, per credit hour - $15 ($12.50);
- Graduate students, per credit hour - $20 ($16);
- Out-of-state students, both graduate and under-graduate, per credit hour - $25 ($20).

British To Boost NATO Force

LONDON (AP) — Britain switched its main defense effort Thursday to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and boasted it is emerging as the strongest military power in Western Europe.

An official defense policy statement listed plans which by 1972 will increase the number of British men assigned to NATO by nearly 30,000 or 60 per cent more than the present level.

These plans will be fulfilled as the withdrawal of British forces from Southeast Asian and Persian Gulf bases takes place. Terminal date of that withdrawal program is 1971.

An exception is Hong Kong. The government white paper disclosed Britain's air, land and sea power will be reinforced on that island colony off Red China's mainland.

The white paper also stressed that Britain means to preserve its capability of hustling back to the Far East if any emergency should arise after 1971.

Campaign Trail Humor

NEW YORK (AP) — A funny thing happened on the way to the White House. In fact, several funny things happened as candidates tried to inject a little humor into the campaign for the nation's most serious job.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York perhaps best summed up the significance of jokes when he told a college audience: "For a long time I've been convinced that the way to know what people are really concerned about is to pay close attention to what they are joking about."

Then Rockefeller in an obvious reference to the antidraft movement quipped about the college senior who told his father he wanted an apartment in Montreal for a graduation present.

Some candidates have learned to laugh at themselves in efforts to smooth over any rough spots in their images. Thus Richard M. Nixon likes to tell about the teen-ager who asked for an autographed picture and said:

"That's a wonderful picture of you, Mr. Nixon. It doesn't look like you at all!" Former Minnesota Gov. Harold Stassen, who appeared on the campaign trail this year wearing a toupee, put down those who joked about his perennial candidacy and his new look by telling a farmer who said:

Mr. Stassen, I'm gonna vote for you, just like I voted for your father."

Rockefeller frequently refers to the fact that he and Nixon live in the same apartment building and are getting along well. "He's offered me his makeup man," said the governor, "and I offered him my plan for solving the garbage strike."

Similarly, Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota, once said of his rival for the Democratic nomination, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey:

"He said he would not neglect his duties as vice president while he is running for president. How a vice president neglects his duties I just do not know."

Gov. Ronald Reagan, of California, who likes to jab at campus rebels and hippies, defined a hippie as someone who wears a button declaring "Make love, not war," but doesn't look capable of either."

But it is former Alabama Gov. George Wallace who has had the last laugh on hippies.

When one young man with shoulder-length hair tried to interrupt his speech, Wallace said politely: "Would you repeat the question, ma'am?"

Sniper Kills Three; Eludes Police Net Around Tenement

NEW YORK (AP) — Three men were shot to death and a fourth wounded early Thursday evening by a gunman who eluded police ringing the Bronx tenement from which he had fired.

The police, unable to find the gunman or draw his fire, concluded when darkness fell that he escaped through a basement connecting all the buildings on the block.

The gunman had a rapid-firing automatic rifle, police said. The superintendent of the building was sought for questioning in connection with the slayings, police said. He was identified as Robert "Bobby" Pugh, about 23.

One police official said the sniper apparently began firing from the street and then moved to the upper floors of the building.

A witness was quoted as telling police he heard gunshots "from one of the upper floors of the building."

The victims, all in their early 20s, were identified as Jose Rivera, Efrain Castro and Manuel Angel Figueroa. The injured man, Robert Roman, was treated and released.

The weapon was described by police as a .30 caliber automatic carbine. They based their conclusion on an examination of 18 spent cartridges.

The shooting scene was on East 138th Street in a largely Negro and Puerto Rican area of the South Bronx.

The shooting came on the day of the funeral for Angel Angelof, the Central Park sniper who killed a 24-year-old girl, wounded three persons and then was shot to death by police. Angelof used a revolver in his shooting spree eight days ago.

"The guy took somebody out of action that was walking in front of the house," said one witness, describing Thursday's shootings. The time, he said, was 6:27 p.m. EDT.

Later, three bullets hit the display windows of a men's store directly across from the building.

Atty. Clark Defends LBJ's Court Switch

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark told several doubting senators Thursday President Johnson has both law and precedent on his side in the Fortas-for-Warren switch at the Supreme Court.

Testifying before the Senate Judiciary Committee, the nation's top law officer said scores of new federal judges have been nominated while the judges they were to replace were still sitting.

"It is vital for the President and Congress to keep the judiciary full so it can perform its service," Clark said of Earl Warren's decision to stay on as chief justice until Abe Fortas is confirmed.

Beyond that, Clark rejected as the product of "a conspiratorial view of life" the notion that Warren tried to influence the choice of Fortas his successor.

"I did not know what was happening so I fell on the floor," said a man in the store.

By the time police arrived, however, the sniper had stopped firing.

A crowd of about 2,000 gathered near the building and at the tenement windows, hampering police efforts.

"If this guy opened up from the window," one police official said, "we couldn't even fire back because of these people gaping out of their windows."

The crowd was not deterred by the sight of one of the victims, lying on the sidewalk where he had fallen. Police moved cautiously in trying to reach the man and one police inspector said, "He appears to be gone and I don't want to jeopardize any of my men to make sure."

Finally, a police department chaplain reached the man and administered the last rites of the Roman Catholic Church and the body was removed.

Defense Leaders Support Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. defense leaders backed the nuclear nonproliferation treaty Thursday but opposed abandoning a U.S. missile defense system just because of prospective missile-curb talks with the Soviets.

Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, told the Senate Foreign Relations committee the Joint Chiefs support the treaty's aims—to outlaw the spread of atomic arms—and view the pact as "not inimical to U.S. security interests."

Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul H. Nitze called the treaty "an important step forward toward new forms of security."

He added its negotiation by the United States and the Soviet Union leads to cautious encouragement that the two superpowers may reach further disarmament agreements.

Few objections were heard as the committee under acting Chairman John J. Sparkman, D-Ala., moved through its second day of hearings on the treaty which President Johnson wants ratified by the Senate before its Aug. 3 adjournment target date.

Friday's major listed witness is Glenn T. Seaborg, Atomic Energy Commission chairman.

Besides barring the nuclear powers from giving atomic weapons to nonnuclear nations and the have-not states from acquiring such arms, the treaty calls also for good-faith negotiations soon on restraining the nuclear race and on general disarmament.

The senators showed special interest in this provision because they have voted to begin a multibillion-dollar antiballistic missile defense system.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., one-time secretary of the Air Force, led those arguing against starting a U.S. ABM system now. He noted former Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara once had vigorously opposed the ABM idea as costly and fruitless.

England Lashed by Gales: Damage Said Colossal

LONDON (AP) — Savage gales whipped the eastern coast Thursday as southwest and central England, deluged by the worst rainstorms in memory, were hit by swirling floods and colossal damage.

Winds of up to 70 miles per hour shrieked along 200 miles of the coastline, hammering holiday resorts, ships and gas drilling rigs in the North Sea. In other parts of the country, rescue workers battled receding floodwaters with boats, helicopters and army amphibious vehicles. Police patrolled some towns in rubber dinghies.

Six persons were feared dead from the floods that began Wednesday night.

The eastern gales caused only minor damage but in the south, officials reported the floods were the worst in 20 years. "The damage is colossal," said the Royal Automobile Club.

Communications were so badly disrupted the government could not immediately assess the damage. Housing Minister Anthony Greenwood told the House of Commons.

The government was treating the floods "as a matter of urgency." Parliament was told, and aid and emergency measures would be decided after reports were received from the flooded districts.

The floods hit the midlands, south Wales, the resort area of Devon and the "Cornish Riviera," leaving a trail of havoc as rivers burst their banks. Thousands were stranded. Troops, police and firemen worked through the night evacuating flooded homes.

Hundreds of roads were under water. Bridges crumbled and collapsed. Communications were washed out. Early trains to the major cities of Bristol, Liverpool, Birmingham and Manchester were canceled but most resumed runs during the day.

Torrential rains ceased after dawn but drizzles interrupted the clearing weather and more rain was forecast in the southwest.

Farms were badly hit and crop damage was extensive.

MIG Jets Shot Down In Dogfight

SAIGON (AP) — The rising tempo of U.S. air blows at storage areas and communications in North Vietnam's southern panhandle has apparently lured MIG jets out to battle, U.S. sources said Thursday.

They pointed to two MIGs shot down in dogfights Tuesday and Wednesday in the panhandle, where no enemy planes once dared to appear.

Most of North Vietnam's 75 or so MIGs were based in Red China to escape the wrath of U.S. air power until President Johnson on March 31 declared most of North Vietnam off limits to bombers.

One U.S. source said there has been "an increase in the number of Communist MIGs deployed in North Vietnam."

There have been previous reports that some of the MIGs had been flown to bases around Hanoi, the capital and Haiphong, the principal port, since Johnson issued his order.

Now apparently some of the North Vietnamese planes have been flown to bases south of Hanoi to meet the U.S. planes blasting away at North Vietnam's men, weapons and supplies moving southward into South Vietnam.

New York Recreation Area Closed

The Pittsburgh Engineer District announced today that the Onoville Recreation Area, Onoville, N.Y., has been closed to picnicking and camping.

The corps of engineers, as a convenience to the public, opened the Onoville recreation area on a temporary basis for picnicking and primitive camping pending issuance of a lease to Cattaraugus County for further development of the area. However, heavy visitation and use have taxed the limited sanitary facilities to a point where continued use will constitute a health hazard.

Boat launching facilities at the Onoville site are not included in the closure and will continue in operation.

Northern Irishmen Assert Independence

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP)—A million Northern Irishmen will assert their independence from Ireland's republic in the annual Orange Day parades Friday. The chances are that this time, at least, there'll be no bloodshed.

Enlightened leadership in the past five years has driven extremists from the forefront of the battle on both sides of the border. The republic's Premier Jack Lynch and Northern Ireland's Prime Minister Terence O'Neill, both too young to have been in their country's civil war, have met to shake hands.

Now things which could have provoked violence a few years back are accepted with hardly a murmur. If it isn't exactly togetherness between the Roman Catholic South and the mainly Protestant North, there's a new spirit of coexistence abroad. There's even some discreet cooperation at official levels.

Protestant Ulster officially is still adamant that this part of partitioned Ireland shall acknowledge Queen Elizabeth II and fly the Union Jack. Members of the dominant Unionist party, which has ruled since 1921, still look on Northern Roman Catholics—one-third of Ulster's population—as open or secret sympathizers with the Irish Republic.

For nearly half a century Belfast has been the most turbulent corner of the British Isles. Its politics have been bedeviled by religion.

Thief Steals

2 Teddy Bears

BRADFORD, Pa. (AP)—Police said a thief smashed a plate glass window Thursday and stole two teddy bears, one on roller skates, and a stuffed white dog.

The teddy bear on skates was found on the roof of the state employment building but the other two toy animals were still missing.

State Police Arrest Escapee

SOMERSET, Pa. (AP)—State police arrested Thursday a prison escapee from New Jersey they said pulled a loaded revolver on a trooper when he approached the man's car.

The trooper drew his revolver and disarmed the man without incident. Police also sent home the man's estranged wife, who claimed she was being held captive with their three children.

Police said a .45-caliber revolver and a .22-caliber rifle, both loaded, and several knives were found in the car. The gun he pointed at the officer was a 7.65-caliber automatic pistol, they said.

The man, Cortez Navaro, 37, of Cincinnati, Ohio, was arraigned before a justice of the peace on charges of violation of the uniform firearms act and pointing a deadly weapon. He was jailed in lieu of $3,500 bail.

Police said Navaro escaped from the Essex County Prison in New Jersey in June, 1967, and apparently lived in Cincinnati since that time.

Police said Navaro's wife, Retta, 28, said Navaro came to her home at Falls Church, Va., and forced her and their three children into a car and was going to take them to Cincinnati.

When Navaro drove the car into a nearby Garrett service station for gasoline, police said, Mrs. Navaro told the attendant she was being held captive.

The attendant called state police and troopers Frank S. Benini and Albert J. Kelly caught up with the car on Pennsylvania 219 about three miles south of here. When Benini approached the car, Navaro pulled the gun from beneath a blanket on the front seat, but put it down when the trooper pulled out his gun.

Police said when Navaro was arrested he gave them the name of Oliver A. Kannon. They said Mrs. Navaro and the three children were returned to their Falls Church home.

Brookville Man Faces Charges

KANE—A Brookville area man Wednesday faced motor code charges for removing a barrier on the Route 321 construction to gain access to the area. Kane-based state police said Raymond Hamnold, R.D. 1, Brookville, will be charged with moving a water tank truck to gain access to the posted area of the highway.

Trooper said the road is blocked about 12 miles north of Kane to the Klondike area intersection on Route 59 by Oblock Construction Co. The road is slated for resurfacing next week, according to police.

Oblock and state highway department district offices on the construction area report that after blacktop is placed the road will remain closed until guard rails and berm work are completed.

An opening of the section will probably not take place officially until mid-August, it was stated.

Man Arrested On Larceny Count

A 19-year-old Warren area man has been charged with larceny by bailie by borough police Sgt. Roger Thelin.

In county jail in lieu of $500 bail is Delbert Bartela, of 167 Follett Run rd., Warren.

Thelin stated that on May 27 of this year, the accused went to Dunham's TV Store at 701 Conewango ave., Warren and took on a trial basis a portable TV set and portable stereo valued at $226.82.

According to police the two items were never returned and further investigation revealed they had been sold to a used furniture dealer and the money converted to Bartela's own use.

Practical jokers went through Philadelphia this week trying torn pieces of bed sheets around the faces on twelve of the city's historical statues. Firemen are shown removing the gag from a statue of George Washington at the Philadelphia Art Museum.

The Teen-Time program is for girls ages 12 through 16 to teach them social graces and poise, sports skills, and arts and crafts.

Air Force General Says Vietnam War Futile Effort

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—An Air Force general admitted Thursday that war is a futile effort. But he insisted that such conflicts, including the current fighting in Vietnam, is just an installment on peace that every American generation must pay.

Gen. Raymond J. Reeves told the 49th annual convention of the Pennsylvania Veterans of Foreign Wars "only when you have experienced war as an active participant... can you fully appreciate the futility of it."

Reeves, commander of the 150,000-man North American Air Defense, made the principal address in the opening of the meeting which ends Saturday. About 15,000 VFW members and their guests are attending sessions.

Reeves said veterans must continue to educate "the public to a broader appreciation of our heritage and the need for proper military forces to protect it."

"You understand the absolute necessity for preparedness in time of peace," he asserted, "if we would avoid war and appreciate adequate defense as the only real safeguard against aggression."

Reeves said that those persons who preach peace at any price, including the militant college students "have no meaningful recollections of World War II."

"The result is that they lack any real feeling for its lessons," he added. "They do not know that recent history has shown us clearly and decisively that giving way to aggression has never solved anything."

Delegates spent much time during the afternoon at separate committee meetings working on resolutions to be presented to the convention Friday and Saturday.

Basic Steel Industry Negotiations Started

PITTSBURGH (AP)—The first night negotiating sessions were scheduled Thursday as both sides tried to step up the pace to reach a new labor contract for the basic steel industry.

Night sessions on the traditionally tough problem of seniority were set for the rest of the week in the company-level talks between the United Steelworkers Union and the U. S. Steel Corp.

The U.S. Steel negotiations show the way for the rest of the industry in most bargaining on contract issues.

Meanwhile, secrecy returned to the top-level talks on money matters after President I. W. Abel reported to the union's advisory committee that negotiations there are at a standstill.

Chairmen of the union committee negotiating individually with the top 11 steel companies reported that they were still dealing mostly with local issues, waiting for breakthroughs in the U.S. Steel talks.

The contract for the nation's 450,000 basic steelworkers expires Aug. 1, and the union has a firm no-contract, no-work policy.

Despite the generally low key of the negotiations, one significant agreement has been reached, although it has not been formally approved from top to bottom.

The agreement is a new job classification manual for basic oxygen furnaces, one of the major goals of the union. It contended that standard classifications did not account for the skills needed in modern, highly automated mills.

Details of the manual changes were not spelled out, but one official said the union considered them highly satisfactory.

Abel, in his first talks with reporters since the negotiations moved to Pittsburgh June 24, said he had not heard from the White House nor the head of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. Union and management hope to reach an agreement without federal intervention.

Abel also said the Japanese announcement that it would voluntarily limit its steel exports to the United States would not be a factor in the negotiations.

"We're not going to compete with the Japanese or anybody else on the basis of a lower wage," he said.

Man Slightly Injured In Auto Crash

JAMESTOWN, N.Y. — A 42-year-old Jamestown man was treated and released from Jamestown General Hospital Thursday night following an accident at South Main and Harrison sts. near Brooklyn Square.

Paul A. Brown of Springdale ave. received a severe head laceration when his auto crashed into a northbound city bus.

Gunnard Kindberg, traffic officer of the Jamestown Police Department, said the accident occurred shortly before 8 p.m. He said Brown's auto was traveling south on Main st. and was turning left on Harrison st. when it collided with the bus. The driver of the bus, Everett M. Thompson, was unhurt. No charges have yet been placed in the mishap.

Auto Hits Truck

A car turned into the side of a tractor trailer truck Thursday on Rt. 6 west of Warren. Both drivers escaped injury.

Bernard Fasnemyer, 37, 110 Center st., driving the truck, was passing a car driven by Mildred A. Swanson, 69, RD 1, Pittsfield, when the woman hit the truck, state police said. Damage was set at $500.

Endless Arguments Hamper Peace Talks

PARIS (AP)—The Paris peace talks, deadlocked for two months, have now begun to bog down completely in endless arguments about de-escalating the war in Vietnam. An opportunity appears to be opening up for secret diplomacy.

A change of policy by either President Johnson in Washington or President Ho Chi Minh in Hanoi could start the negotiations moving again on short notice. Ambassadors W. Averell Harriman and Xuan Thuy have a basis for quick action by developing their personal relations through private, informal talks.

But the policies which govern negotiating positions seem immovable for the moment.

In line with tactics of maximum contact, Harriman has kept Soviet Ambassador Valerian Zorin informed as well as top diplomats of Britain, France, Yugoslavia, India, Canada and others in Paris.

Thuy has been reported keeping close contacts with Communist diplomats. North Vietnamese authorities are in frequent touch with the French Foreign Office. The Soviet Union and France have been mentioned most often by American diplomats as possible go-betweens.

So far French and Soviet authorities appear to have judged that the time for intervention was not ripe.

The difficulty for the diplomats is that the military operations in Vietnam are still the decisive field. North Vietnam has been striving for a victory that would give it the upper hand in Paris. The United States has been trying to defeat this strategy while seeking an agreement here that would reduce the level of the war.

The fact that the talks do not appear to be mired in rhetoric may increase pressure on both Hanoi and Washington to find some way to get them moving again.

After Johnson limited the bombing of the North March 3, both sides won acclaim for the April 3 agreement to talk at the May 3 agreement, after month's haggling, to meet in Paris. But the gloss has been knocked off those initial moves toward peace by the reality of the continuing war.

The 12th session of the Paris talks was held Wednesday. They demanded once more that the United States stop attacking the North unconditionally, and once more Harriman demand reciprocity.

Nixon Wins Chautauqua Straw Vote

CHAUTAUQUA—Former Vice President Richard M. Nixon was the leading choice for the presidency in a straw vote taken here Tuesday at a sidewalk session of the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle (CLSC).

Next in line was another Republican, New York State Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

The vote was taken among approximately 400 attending the session to hear Dr. Warren J. Hickman, vice president of Eisenhower College in Seneca Falls, speak on the topic "Presidential Candidates."

The straw poll gave these results: Nixon, 86; Rockefeller, 56; McCarthy, 54; Humphrey, 8; Percy, 2; Reagan, 2; and Wallace, 1.

Dr. Hickman said that, although Rockefeller and Eugene McCarthy may have more appeal with the general public, the delegates are supporting Humphrey and Nixon.

He also stated that he believes Nixon and Humphrey have the presidential nominations "sewed up" right now, in spite of the fact that they are the "two most distrusted candidates."

How the presidential election will go in November will be determined, he said, by the outcome of the Paris peace talks on Vietnam, missile disarmament and domestic tranquility.

Shafer Says Reagan's Entry Would Help Gov. Rockefeller

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Shafer, again booming Nelson Rockefeller as the best man for the job, said Thursday he would welcome California Gov. Ronald Reagan into the Republican race for president.

A published report in Boston said Reagan intended to soon announce his favorite son role and become an active candidate for the GOP presidential nomination.

"I would welcome him into the race," Shafer smilingly told a news conference, "It would be very helpful to Gov. Rockefeller."

The story was immediately denied in Sacramento by a Reagan aide and Shafer said he had no way of knowing whether the California chief executive would make an active bid for the presidency.

"The last time I talked to him about it, he said he was not going to get in the race," said Shafer, who endorsed Rockefeller's candidacy a month ago.

Most political analysts believe a Reagan campaign would cut into the support of former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, thus enhancing Rockefeller's prospects.

Shafer, who said he would begin his nationwide swing on Rockefeller's behalf next week, again hailed the New York governor as the "finest political leader on the American scene." "Gov. Rockefeller has more appeal among the non-white segment of our society and other minority groups and the young people than Dick has," Shafer said.

"He has greater experience in executive management. He's the senior governor in the country and has worked daily with the problems of the people," the governor continued.

"I would say he's even more experienced in foreign affairs, due to his years of service in the state department. He's been dealing with foreign affairs all his adult life."

However, he refused to be drawn into a discussion of what he considered to be Nixon's political liabilities.

"I don't want to get into that," Shafer responded when questioned, "Nelson has his liabilities and so does Dick."

"Both are dedicated public servants and excellent leaders. I just happen to think that Nelson is the finest political leader on the American scene."

Shafer said his cross-country tour for Rockefeller would begin next Tuesday in New Jersey and take him to West Virginia the next day.

However, he said he would remain close to Pennsylvania until the General Assembly embarks on an extended summer recess, scheduled to begin after next week's meeting.

The tentative itinerary has Shafer logged for stops in Michigan, Minnesota, Vermont, Maine, Illinois, South Dakota, Wyoming, Colorado, Nevada, Washington, Oregon, New Mexico, Texas and Georgia. He winds up at the GOP nominating convention in Miami Aug. 5.

Shafer's staff emphasized, however, that the schedule still is subject to change.

Canoe Training Program Set

The Allegheny Outdoor Club has scheduled a canoe training program at Crescent Park at 2 p.m. Sunday, July 14. Anyone who wishes to learn how to use a canoe can attend.

Wayne Mann, deputy supervisor for the Allegheny National Forest, and Jan Stanczak, a systems analyst at Struthers Wells, both expert canoeists, will be on hand to give basic canoe instruction to the general public.

Several back-up instructors, including Ted Grisev and James Palmer, will also be available to assist.

The training session will include basic canoe instruction such as proper loading and unloading, paddling, controlling direction and safety procedures while canoeing.

Several extended canoe trips on the Allegheny Reservoir and the Allegheny River are in the planning stages, according to members of the Outdoor Club. Sunday's activity will help prepare new canoe enthusiasts to participate in future canoe outings.

The Allegheny National Forest is cooperating in the project by supplying technical assistance and several canoes from the Blue Jay Conservation Center.

The Allegheny Outfitters in Clarendon are providing the canoes and will have information available concerning their rates for canoe rental at the Allegheny Outfitters.

The Outdoor Club would like to remind all interested persons that participation in the training is entirely at the individual's own risk.

Governor, Minority Leader Pledge Gun Control Bill

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Shafer and House Democratic Minority Leader Herbert Fineman repeated Thursday that they both were dedicated to the enactment of strong gun control legislation this year.

However, both failed to settle the confusion surrounding the question of whether they had come to an agreement on a compromise gun bill.

Shafer told a news conference he had made no agreement and had seen no recommendations to that end from representatives of his and Fineman's.

"I would think that I would have to review an agreement," Shafer said. "At no time have I seen any recommendations and at no time has any commitment been made on my behalf."

Fineman, who issued an announcement Wednesday saying that an agreement had been reached, commented after the governor's news conference:

"I learned this morning for the first time that the governor has indicated that there is no agreement on his part to endorse this legislation."

"I do not know in what respect the governor disagrees with the latest version of the proposed legislation, but it is my opinion that it is a fair proposal."

Fineman indicated Wednesday that Shafer was opposed to the registration of all long guns such as rifles. It was on this point that Atty. Gen. William C. Senett accused him of undercutting the talks.

Shafer was asked if he would sign a bill which would require long guns to be registered and he said: "I would."

Asked if he favored such a requirement, he replied: "I do."

The compromise announced by Fineman would have required all gun users to obtain a permit, but would register only handguns.

The Philadelphia Democrat added that it was his understanding Deputy Atty. Gen. Frank Lawley, representing Senett, had agreed to the plan.

Fineman said he hoped the governor would agree to the plan he outlined, but added that even if he did not, he would attempt to have it approved on the House floor Monday.

In other comments at his news conference, Shafer said he was in favor of making it more difficult for minor parties to become officially recognized political parties in Pennsylvania.

"I'm a great believer in the two party system," he said in response to a question, "It has provided this country with a political stability no other country has seen."

"I don't want to see a proliferation of minor parties in this state."

Shafer, two, indicated he supported a two-bill package pending in the House which would require minor parties to retain a registration equal to the number of votes it took for them to be certified.

The measures, defeated Wednesday but revived for a second vote, would eliminate the Constitutional Party in Pennsylvania. The conservative party required 42,000 votes to secure recognition in 1966, but has a registration of only 3,900.

Shafer also remained non-committal on a Senate-approved bill which would call for county referendums on the question of the Sunday sale of liquor. The bill is now in the House Liquor Committee.

"I never promised during my campaign for governor I would veto such a bill," Shafer said. "I said I was not in favor of Sunday sales, I will face that decision if and when it reaches my desk."

Soldier Loses Both Legs In Combat

FALCONER, N.Y.—A Falconer area serviceman has suffered amputation of both legs in a mine detonation while on combat duty in Vietnam, according to word received Wednesday by his parents.

Sp-4 Thomas M. VanGuilder, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morton L. VanGuilder, Gerry-Levant road, was placed on the seriously ill list July 9 in a hospital in Vietnam, a telegram from U.S. Army officials said Tuesday. No other details were given by the Army.

It continued, "In the judgment of the attending physician, his condition is of such severity that there is cause for concern, but no imminent danger to life."

Wednesday the VanGuilders were notified their son had been transferred to the U.S. Air Force Base Hospital at Clark AFB, Philippine Islands.

The soldier, who will be 21 July 19, is one of 11 children in the VanGuilder family. He entered the Army on October 4, 1966.

Eagles To Seek Membership Changes

OIL CITY—The Fraternal Order of Eagles Lodge of Oil City will ask the Grand Aerie Fraternal Order at its national convention to eliminate the word "Caucasian" from the club's membership applications.

If the resolution is approved at the national convention in Houston August 1, the way would be open for Negroes and other nonwhites to apply for membership in clubs throughout the nation.

Applications to FOE local lodges now specify that only Caucasians may apply for membership.

The Oil City club approved Tuesday a resolution which was passed unanimously by 250 members attending a meeting, according to a past worthy president of the lodge.

Maurice Spain Jr. of Pittsburgh, secretary of the board of grand trustees and a member of the Oil City Lodge, presented the resolution. He said, however, he submitted the resolution as a private individual and member not as an official of Grand Aerie.

Spain refused to comment further on the resolution, stating it was a private matter with the Oil City Club.

Eight Become New Citizens

Eight persons including five women and three men became United States citizens at 10 a.m. Thursday in naturalization court.

Taking the oath of allegiance before Judge Alexander C. Flick Jr. were Nicola Mangione, Maria Tomenica Mangione, Francesco Mangione, Carmen Tutmaker, Nurye Cali, Wanda Tucker, Ludmila Perel and Michael Perel.

As is his custom, Judge Flick reminded the new citizens of their responsibilities and obligation to show proper respect for law. He stated that it has been urged that naturalization court be on the federal level only and removed from the county. It is the jurist's opinion, however, that the ceremony should take place in the persons' own court room where they can become acquainted with their judge and some of the court procedure.

As persons who have chosen to become citizens, the judge advised, those taking the oath should join a political party of their choice, become an active member and participate in order to achieve government by the people.

The judge also recommended taking part in community and civic organizations and emphasized the vital role played by the Red Cross Blood Bank. He recalled the words of the late President John F. Kennedy — "Ask not what your country can do for you but what you can do for your country." He added, for the same thought should be applied "to your county, township or borough."

Representatives of the League of Women Voters, Warren County Historical Society and Daughters of American Colonists were present to greet and congratulate the new citizens.

Judge Fines 3 Youths Involved in Death Case

INDIANA, Pa. — Three Blairsville youths were fined and placed on probation after testifying in the Indiana County juvenile court Tuesday about the June 21 drinking bout that involved the death of a companion.

David Lawrence Salva and Allen Wilbur Palmer, both 17, and Lewis George Palek, 16, were fined $100 each and put on probation for six months.

Judge Edwin Clark also ordered that the youths be home at 11 p.m. unless accompanied by a parent, for the next six months, and that they pay the costs of prosecution in addition to the fines.

Each of the youths testified voluntarily to the events of the night of June 21. Young Salva and Randy Myers, 16, also of Blairsville were found lying on a Blairsville church lawn. Salva was hospitalized for two days. An autopsy revealed that Myers, who was dead when he was found, died of acute intoxication.

Salva and the other youths testified that Myers did not appear to be intoxicated heavily during the drinking spree.

The three youths told the court that they and Myers had pooled their money and requested John N. Norcio, 21, of San Jose, Calif., to purchase liquor and beer for them. Norcio was visiting in Blairsville at the time.

According to the youths' testimony, Norcio purchased two fifths of cherry-flavored vodka and two quarts of beer for them, and delivered the beverages to the youths who were waiting at a Blairsville baseball field. Much of the liquor was consumed at a farm south of Blairsville and then the group traveled to Latrobe before returning to Blairsville in a car driven by Palmer.

A fourth youth, Lisle Kunkle III, 17, of Blairsville, testified that he traveled with the group but neither helped to purchase the liquor nor to drink it. His testimony concurred with that of the other youths.

James Brubaker, acting Blairsville police chief, and Patrolman George Davis explained the results of their investigation to the court.

The youths were found guilty by Judge Clark under the state liquor law which prohibits minors from purchasing, possessing and consuming alcoholic beverages.

They were lectured by Judge Clark on infractions of the law and warned that they would be jailed if the terms of their probation were violated.

In connection with the case, Norcio has been apprehended and has posted a $10,000 bond for appearance in the county court on charges of voluntary manslaughter, contributing to the delinquency of minors, and furnishing liquor to minors.

Judge Clark told the courtroom gathering that the Norcio case had been "handled deplorably."

He said the case had received too much publicity and that "the justice of the peace had no business setting bond on a voluntary manslaughter charge."

New Blue Cross Contract Approved by Department

HARRISBURG (AP) — The State Insurance Department happily stamped approval Thursday on a new Blue Cross hospital contract which it said contained specific incentives to control the rising costs of hospital care.

"While the incentive provisions are largely voluntary," said Insurance Commissioner David O. Maxwell, "the acceptance of the principle represents an important breakthrough in the battle to cope with the crisis of ever-increasing costs of medical care in this commonwealth and throughout the country."

Maxwell issued the comment as he approved a revised agreement between Blue Cross of Greater Philadelphia and area hospitals. It was negotiated by Blue Cross and the Delaware Valley Hospital Council on behalf of 87 member hospitals. The commissioner earlier had disapproved a proposed contract by the same group on March 18 of this year.

Two Charged With Vandalism

MEADVILLE — Pennsylvania State Police have arrested two youths who they claim broke into a Conneaut Lake cottage, stole $159.95 worth of articles and caused $1,220.50 damage by malicious mischief.

Arrested were Eric Allen Demchek, 18, and a 16-year-old boy, both of Pittsburgh, who told officers they were "friends" of the daughter of the cottage owner, George E. Sutter Jr. of Pittsburgh.

State Police said the alleged break-in occurred on June 18. Trooper Alan Phillips, who investigated the case, reported that an assortment of articles — including bottles of whiskey, bedspreads, water skis, after-shave lotion, perfumes, mirrors, clock, canned foods, and a flashlight — were stolen.

The burglars also tore pillows apart, ripped pictures and photographs, slit upholstery on a davenport, broke two windows, smashed lampshades and bulbs, damaged a desk and counters in the kitchen, and tore up 10 new decks of playing cards, according to authorities.

Demchek was arraigned Wednesday before the Peace Wesley Sitter, waived hearing and posted a $2,500 bond for his appearance in court.

County Revokes 'Hippy Colony' Building Permit

MEADVILLE, Pa. (AP) — County commissioners revoked Thursday a building permit for construction of a personage by a church local residents call a "hippy colony."

The Anthropodelic Church lost a permit to build a one — story building it said would be built of scrap lumber valued at $300.

In revoking the permit, the commissioners said the building would not meet the standards of other dwellings in the area.

The church, which claims 35 to 40 members, recently migrated to Crawford County from California.

The building permit was issued Monday by the county assessors' office.

The personage would have been built on a 25-acre site on Pennsylvania 18 just south of Harmonsburg.

There is still a great deal to be desired when one takes a close look at Warren County's roads, despite the amount of concrete that has been poured and the plans that have been drawn during the past couple of years to fulfill our needs.

Seal Report on Love Life

WASHINGTON -- One of the most carefully guarded confidential reports on Capitol Hill pertains to the love life of Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton. It is tightly held partly because it shows that Rep. Michael Feighan, the Cleveland, Ohio, Democrat, had nothing better to do than pry into the alleged indiscretions of these famous lovers. The official excuse, of course, was to protect the nation from "material offensive to public morals" by barring Burton from playing in "Hamlet" in New York.

At any rate, the transcript was "sealed forever." However, we have obtained a copy and believe the nation is strong enough to survive its most lurid passages.

Rep. Feighan, as chairman of the House Immigration Committee, began gravely: "The subcommittee will come to order. The purpose of this meeting is to inquire into the administration of the Immigration and Nationality Act in the context of the Richard Burton case."

He called as his key witness Abba Schwartz, then in charge of the State Department's Bureau of Security and Consular Affairs.

"Do I understand," demanded indignant Feighan, "that the bureau that you administer regards the flaunting of immorality as a public virtue, as unworthy of special concern? I just ask you, surely you do not mean that the public overtones and public undertones of the Burton-Taylor case so evident to the mature mind were not recognized by this experienced consular officer?" (Feighan referred to the official who issued the Burton visa.)

"I think he performed his functions correctly under the existing laws and regulations," said Schwartz.

"Were you or the visa-issuing officer aware of statements made by responsible religious leaders in the United States decrying the evil effects of this widely publicized international escapade. Upon the morals of our American youth?" asked the Congressman from Cleveland.

"I am personally unaware of those," said Schwartz. He went on to explain that even an admission of adultery would not have barred Burton from the country.

"I want to know," inquired Rep. Arch Moore, R-W. Va., "is Richard Burton guilty of adultery?"

"I have no knowledge," said Schwartz helplessly.

"I assume, having seen the affectionate embraces spread across the newspapers of America, it is reasonable to conclude that at some time or other this indiscretion has occurred," suggested Moore. He merely wanted to know what the "indiscretion" would be called in view of Burton's status as a divorced man.

"I do not have an answer whether or not the is no better way to understand another's problems than to see it with your own eyes and listen to first hand testimony.

The state over the years has been told of the need for new roads and improvements through the efforts of the local highway committee. But now the top man himself has had the chance to see for himself what we want.

The question: How long do we wait?

divorced person is guilty of adultery," Schwartz said. "There is no question that the married person is."

"There is not any question," added Moore sternly, "that his coming to the United States is to deal in an immoral act, whether the term 'adultery' or 'immoral act' is interchangeable. . . . Certainly, he is going to come in here for sexual reasons, at least, which is the very, very minimum."

"He is coming in here principally. . . as far as I know," suggested Schwartz, "to appear in the play 'Hamlet' in New York."

"Have you considered revocation of the visa issued to Mr. Richard Burton?" inquired Feighan.

"Mr. Chairman," confessed Schwartz, "I have not."

"Well, why not?" demanded Feighan.

"I do not know the ground of revocation," Schwartz replied.

"I think that should be considered very carefully, and pronto," snorted Feighan.

Immigration Commissioner Raymond Farrell was summoned next behind closed doors. He explained that Burton had been permitted to stop in Los Angeles on his way to Canada, where he was rehearsing for "Hamlet."

"We felt that since we did not have any evidence at the time which would enable us to really substantiate an exclusion order, that we would wait until he came back in from Canada and hope that in the meantime we might be able to acquire some," Farrell suggested hopefully. He offered to question Burton about his love life at some neutral point on the Canadian border.

"At a border point?" asked Moore.

"Yes, sir," said Farrell. "Perhaps at Niagara Falls."

As it happened, Burton demonstrated his honorable intentions by marrying Miss Taylor in Canada. If they stopped at Niagara Falls, it was for a honeymoon.

Note: Abba Schwartz later was hounded out of the State Department by the congressional vigilantes who by blocking immigration want to keep America a closed society. He has now written an engrossing book about his misadventures in government. It is called "The Open Society."

The Army is finding it almost impossible to stop the rocket shelling of Saigon.

The guerrillas sneak into a rice paddy and mold rocket launchers out of mud in the dikes. The mud is shaped into the exact circumference of the rocket, then dried under the hot sun until it hardens.

The mud launchers are carefully angled to guide rockets into Saigon. By this means, one guerrilla can launch a volley of rockets by wiring them all to a single ignition device and setting them off with flashlight batteries.

By the time the Americans figure out where the rockets came from, the lone guerrilla has disappeared.

Not Much Of a System

The Presidency remains the center of American life. No other interest can compete with it. We have had 35 men in 179 years. The tallest was Abraham Lincoln, 6 feet, 4 inches. The shortest was James Madison, 5 feet 4 inches, weight 100 pounds. The heaviest was William Howard Taft -- 340 pounds.

Only three were career soldiers: Zachary Taylor, Ulysses S. Grant, and Dwight D. Eisenhower. The four who were assassinated were each elected in a year ending with a zero: Lincoln, 1860; Garfield, 1880; McKinley, 1900; Kennedy, 1960. Two were known to have fathered illegitimate children: Grover Cleveland acknowledged his; Warren G. Harding remained silent.

Six Presidents were not fathers. The others had 129 children. John Tyler married twice and fathered 15 youngsters. Thomas Jefferson tired of the bickering about who was to sit where at the President's table, so he ordered a large circular one built. President Madison invited the Marquis de Lafayette to the White House in 1815, but never forgave him for leaving a live alligator in the East Room.

The longest administration belongs to Franklin D. Roosevelt, who served 12 years and one month. The shortest was that of William Henry Harrison, who delivered a two-hour inaugural address and died a month later.

Millard Fillmore's wife Abigail started the first White House library in 1850. William H. Taft got stuck in a White House bathtub and it required plumbers with special cutters to get him out.

Calvin Coolidge was sworn in by his father, a notary public, when word reached Northampton, Mass., that President Harding had died suddenly. Woodrow Wilson regarded it as patriotic to raise sheep on the White House lawn.

The greatest number of ballots ever taken by a convention to nominate a President was the Democratic, in New York City, 1924. It required 103 ballots to break a deadlock between Alfred E. Smith and William McAdoo and nominate a loser, John W. Davis. In 1896, William Jennings Bryan, who electrified the nation with his Cross of Gold speech, coated his body all summer with gin. On Nov. 7, 1916, bearded Charles Evans Hughes, Republican, went to bed elected President and awakened in the morning to concede to Wilson.

In 1800, Aaron Burr had as many electoral votes as his rival, Thomas Jefferson, but the House of Representatives gave the nod to the Sage of Monticello. Twenty-four years later, Andrew Jackson had 99 electoral votes and John Quincy Adams had 84, and Congress acclaimed Adams president.

America had several Presidents who could not win fifty percent of the votes cast.

The minority men are: John Quincy Adams, 32.2; James K. Polk 49.6; Zachary Taylor 47.3; James Buchanan 45.6; Abraham Lincoln (1860) 39.8; Rutherford B. Hayes 47.9; James A. Garfield (1880) 48.5; Benjamin Harrison 47.8; Grover Cleveland (1892) 46; Woodrow Wilson (1912 election) 41.9; Wilson (1916) 49.3; Harry Truman 49.6; John F. Kennedy 49.7.

Stephen A. Douglas campaigned against A. Lincoln by referring to the rail splitter contemptuously as "a smutty joker." The highest percentage of votes cast was earned by Lyndon B. Johnson: 61.1. The only President who died a bachelor was James Buchanan. The lowest number of votes to elect a President occurred in 1824, when 115,696 won for John Quincy Adams.

Many believe that the greatest trouncing was administered by Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1936: 523 electoral votes to Landon's 8. In 1820, James Monroe beat John Quincy Adams 231 to 1. In the United States, there are only five counties which voted the winner in every Presidential race from 1896 onward: Strafford, in New Hampshire; Coos, in New Hampshire; Crook County, Oregon; Laramie County, Wyoming; Palo Alto, Iowa. They are small, but each of them picked the President correctly 18 times in a row. Thomas Jefferson was the first candidate to buy presses and newspapers so that stories friendly to his candidacy would be published.

When the conventions nominate their tickets next month, about 65 per cent of the voters will have made up their minds. All the campaigning, the oratory, the radio, television speeches, advertising, and tousers will be for 35 per cent of the vote. Of these, possibly half are negative voters.

"We have met the enemy and they are theirs." -- Oliver Hazard Perry.

"I've just begun to quit." -- John Paul Jones.

"Don't fire even if you see the whites of their eyes." -- William Prescott.

"Damn the torpedoes! Full speed ahead!" -- Admiral Farragut.

"I shall not return." -- General MacArthur.

"I propose to talk it out on this line if it takes all summer." -- Ulysses S. Grant.

"This sort of thing clearly won't do. In fact it might actually increase the violence."

Retirement Benefits

HARRISBURG -- Columnist's Notebook:

LEGISLATIVE NEST FEATHERING -- Decidedly unusual on the part of Pennsylvania's legislative leaders (and His Excellency who has been in a work-together conference on the subject) is their determination to push ahead in this election year session for greater personal emolument for members of the legislative branch.

This time it isn't a question of increasing legislative salaries -- they did that three years ago -- but rather it's one of raising maximum retirement benefits to a $12,000 a year ceiling for Pennsylvania's legislative veterans, with the possibility of dropping the current age 50 minimum to a flat six years of service.

(Or, as one Capitol Hill observer expressed it: "Pretty soon they'll be eligible for retirement just for running for office!")

Interesting part of the legislative emolument enhancement program now being toyed with is that during legislative election years (such as this year when all 203 House seats are on the block plus half the 50 Senate seats) legislators almost invariably shy away from peccable diplomat and conservative financier, to guide the social revolution which is bound to strain the franc.

If the first period of the fifth republic could be labelled under the single word "decolonialization" and the second under the single word "independence," the third phase now beginning can best be described by the single word "participation."

"Participation" doesn't yet have any precise meaning nor any single accepted text. It is intended to imply labor-capital cooperation. In the administration and profit-sharing of industrial enterprises. In this sense the top Gaullists frankly confess that it doesn't differ from the general's earlier catch-all word for social reform, "association."

Two left-wing Gaullists have frequently discussed "participation" -- Louis Vallon and Rene Capitant -- but what they have said is incomplete and contradictory. There is not yet even a rough draft for the kind of enabling law on "participation" that must be drawn up and presented to the assembly next autumn. However, Gaullists of this third phase hope the word can become a kind of symbol that would embrace cooperation between administration and universities to agriculture and factories.

De Gaulle apparently regarded Pompidou's approach to social reform as insufficiently drastic but the general had other things on his mind and kept staving off further action until last May's crisis faced him with reality. One can only surmise that he not only resented Pom-

(1) tax increase proposals, and (2) anything pertaining to personal betterment, such as pay increases, etc., which might even remotely remain timely in the average voter's noggins.

Worth noting is the fact that legislative leaders last year (a non-legislative election year) did indeed try to work through an "open-end" (no limit) retirement program for themselves but public uproar and protest prompted a gubernatorial veto in the final analysis from Governor Shafer. The current move is a follow-up.

But what has raised many an eyebrow on Capitol Hill is not so much that legislative leaders are pressing the retirement enrichment project in this legislative election year -- but that they are even bold enough just to raise the subject!

PENN EXPO POSTMORTEM -- Pennsylvania's first blooded effort in the field of promoting a huge industrial exposition displaying Pennsylvania's industrial might -- the 1968 Penn Expo, the week of June 24 -- must be classified as anything but a roaring success.

Held in the sprawling, heat-smitten Farm Show Building in uptown Harrisburg, it proved somewhat of a disappointment to Director Dean Moore (subject of one of our recent columns) who now is taking a second look at the possibility of another Expo go-around next year.

"It was a nice looking show,"

he tells us, "but attendance was way below expectations."

He's studying offers to take the show to Pittsburgh or Philadelphia next year. Other possibilities: a different time of year, an air-conditioned building (it hit 96 the second day), fewer days run, and free admission to the entertainment.

BLIND MAN'S BLUFF -- The controversy over gun control legislation has brought a raft of mail to Capitol Hill, but none quite so curious as one sent by a Washington County man. The writer had originally penned a message to Representative Herbert Fineman, the House Democratic Floor Leader who is the chief author of the proposed "Pennsylvania Weapons Control Act of 1968" introduced a month or so ago.

Mr. Fineman had replied to the letter and then received a second message.

Here is one paragraph of that letter:

"One of your statements was that the laws we now have in Pennsylvania are so lax that even a blind man can buy a gun without any questions asked. Now may I ask, 'Why shouldn't a blind man be permitted to buy a gun to protect his home and loved ones?' Surely he needs a gun more than you or I. If he is a law-abiding citizen then why should he be refused the right to buy a gun without the red tape of registering it or himself as you propose?"

Why, indeed?

Inflation And Your Pension

John D., a $16,000 a year salesman, retired in 1962 on a retirement income of $6,324 a year, 30 per cent of his pre-retirement yearly wage plus Social Security benefits. Because of Social Security benefit increases since 1962, John D's 1967 retirement income amounted to $6,431.

However, because of cost of living increases since 1962 the buying power of John D's 1967 income was a full 8.6 per cent below that of his 1962 income.

And his pension income is now a full 15.3 per cent behind the rising earnings of the average working American. Even 1968's across-the-board Social Security benefit boosts have left him 5 per cent behind where he was in 1962 in terms of buying power and 11.6 per cent behind in terms of earnings of working Americans.

Joe S. was earning $3,000 a year when he retired in 1947 with company pension income and Social Security benefits totaling $1,728. Today his buying power is 8 per cent less than it was two decades ago and his income is 65.7 per cent less than it would have been if he had continued working.

These examples, drawn up by the international management consulting firm of Towers, Perrin, Forster & Crosby, dramatize how brutally hard inflation has been hitting and is continuing to hit the U.S. retiree. They dramatize also the widening gap between the working-earning younger American and the non-working retiree.

Inherent in them are vitally important questions for U.S. corporations and for Social Security policymakers:

If our society fails to control inflation, should we provide the elderly retired citizen with automatic protection against the erosion of his buying power?

If so, who should provide the protection, the federal government through Social Security, or the corporation through pension plans?

Should we be trying to find some means of maintaining retirement income proportionate to the income of working Americans so that retirees can share in rising living standards? The pensions of many who retired years ago do not take into account the fact that such one-time luxuries as cars, long-distance telephone calls and TV sets have now become necessities for most of us.

What is management's responsibility here? What, the federal government's? What, the individual family's?

Some top U.S. corporations have adopted policies in recent years of periodically hiking pension income for their retired workers. Others provide automatic pension raises to cover cost of living increases. Under the U.S. Civil Service employee's retirement plan, today's biggest "cost of living plan," pension raises are granted whenever living costs rise 3 per cent or more above the level at the time the last raise was granted.

While Congress periodically votes Social Security benefit raises to offset the effect of inflation, these boosts are not automatic, as they are in many other industrialized countries.

The key argument against automatic benefit increases is that this would amount to official acceptance of inflation as a way of life. Similarly, the corporation providing automatic pension increases is linking its future obligations to a quantity of inflation which it can neither predict nor control.

Nevertheless, both our Social Security system and our corporations must do more to shield retirees from inflation. Working Americans must attempt to fill the future income gap by their own retirement savings plans. Local communities must create more part-time job opportunities for the elderly.

In our increasingly complex society, the retiree's dilemma cannot help but become even more urgent. Unless we act reasonably and in time, the dilemma will explode in our faces.

Borough to Pave Campbell Hill

By LOIS McCLOSKEY
After what seems a lifetime of eating and breathing the dust of Campbell Hill road, its residents are finally to have a black top surface some time this summer, according to reports from the Monday Night meeting of Borough Council at 7 p. m.

Due to the absence of both president William Robinson and vice president Harold Konkle, William Karns presided as chairman of the Council meeting which was called mainly to get approval of the payment of current bills.

At the short business session, Mrs. Lucille E. Brady and Mrs. George Sheckler appeared to report a sewer problem in their area. It appears that a resident of a trailer back of their homes bulldozed and closed the sewer causing an overflow of water.

Mrs. Brady said the sewer had been opened but she now found it clogged again. Councilman Fred Barr reported that George Morrison had been instructed to open the sewer and send the bill to the trailer owner. Council stated that the matter would be turned over to its attorney who would notify the trailer owner not to tamper with sewer lines.

George Aikin Jr. was to be instructed to advertise bids for the black topping of Campbell Hill road as mandated by highway department requirements. The paving is to be paid out of general funds of the borough. This notification was in the form of a motion which carried.

A letter from the Bureau of Correction stated that the Borough jail was inspected on June 19 and was found to be maintained according to minimum requirements, by Arthur Presse, jail inspector.

Current bills presented by Karns amounted to $2538.52. The June 30 balance amounted to $5241.38.

TIDIOUTE HISTORY

Pioneers' Graves Neglected

By LOIS McCLOSKEY

Just an even 100 of Tidioute's pioneers lie mouldering in their graves amid a tangle of weeds, wild sweet peas, tiger lilies, trailing myrtle and pine cones in our first cemetery which is surrounded by a rusting iron fence.

We have mentioned this old land mark several times hoping that our town citizenry would clean it out and make it a place to be proud of, but to date have seen no action. It looked just the same when we visited it on Monday night, July 8. We couldn't get inside of the fence and only two head stones were visible. One of these lay against a tree and contained one name not on our present list of the deceased, that of a Carl Alger listed on the stone of one Barret Alger who died in 1865 at the age of 38.

Road markers have been placed at the site of the first flowing well and the Grandin well where the first explosive was used, the first set of drilling tools lost, and the first dry hole. Why do we not put up a road marker pointing to the place of burial of our first permanent settler, Richard Arters who was born in 1759, came to Tidioute in 1806 and died in 1847? He is buried in the old cemetery along with Benjamin Huff who died in 1821 at the age of 81 and Arthur Magill who died in 1847 at the age of 80. Both were Revolutionary War soldiers.

The reason for our immediate concern about this cemetery is that we have been asked by the Warren County Historical Society to do a walking tour of Tidioute on either the 21st or 28th of July or the 4th or 11th of August. The places they want to see are: the Old Cemetery, a grave in the Catholic Cemetery of a woman born in 1791, Dr. Acomb's Statute in the Protestant Cemetery, the flowing well, the Grandin well, Ben Hogan's old home and a walk along the main st. of the town.

When we are expecting guests in our home, the first thing we do is put it in apple pie order. What are we going to do as residents of Tidioute to put our best foot forward for our county guests?

We would appreciate it if the business men of Main st. would check their deeds to ascertain their stores and offices. We have records and a map of early Tidioute with information of the early hotels, the Vets building, the Scott Block, the bank, A. Dunn's store, the old Encampment Hall (now the Christy movie house), and the Chocolate shop, but none of the other old buildings are listed.

Any one having old pictures of the town or of their place of business could place them in their windows to point up the early history of the town. A picture of the Old Union school would be of interest or one of any of the early graduating classes, or the inside of the Grandin theater.

This isn't exactly a sequel-entennial for the town but it is the first time the Historical Society has planned a tour of Tidioute. Let us make it one of the most interesting they have taken to date!

To refer again to the old cemetery, we here give you a list of the names found on headstones there. If any of them are your ancestors, won't you help to make their graves a pleasant resting place? Richard Arters and his wife Mary, Thomas, son of Thomas Arters; Barret C. Alger and sons Milo and Stephen, Carl Alger; John Birch and wife Ann; A. Bristol, daughter of W. A. and J. J.; Ann Amelia,

City Ice Clubs Tavern, Sub Shop Downs Norris

City Ice made sure they were going to hold on to their two game edge by clubbing the Sheffield Tavern, 18-8. On the other hand the Warren Sub Shop wasn't about to let it get any more than 17-1.

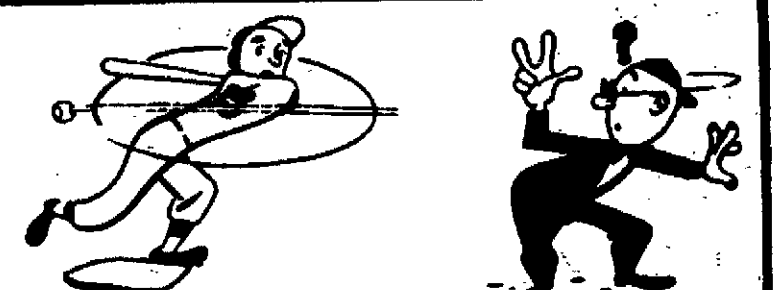

City Ice started off to a shaky start in the first three innings and found themselves trailing 4-1. Support for winning hurler Chuck Pettit started to roll in the fourth inning. Seven runs were tacked up in the fourth, three in the fifth and another seven-run binge in the seventh to top Sheffield's win streak at five.

Jay McAulay of the Taverners swung at Pettit's slavers with a little authority and as a result came up with a double and triple.

Gate Sales Drop, Decline Should Reach One Million

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball, with runaway pennant races likely to compound its difficulties, is experiencing another sharp drop in attendance, an Associated Press midseason survey disclosed Thursday.

The National League, which trailed off more than 2 million at the gate last year, appears headed for another decline of at least a million in 1968.

Through games up to the All-Star game break, the NL was down almost three-quarters of a million paid customers from 1967. The 1968 total was 6,213,572 compared to 6,956,413 — an overall loss of 742,841.

The senior circuit has been slumping steadily since its peak year in 1966 when it drew 15,015,471 through the turnstiles. It dropped off to 13,971,430 last year and, with the defending champion St. Louis Cards now outdistancing their closest pursuer by 10 games, the loop's aggregate could drop under 12 million this season.

The American League shows only a minimal decline from its record year in 1967 when its final attendance was 11,336,923. The AL has drawn 5,513,034 compared to 5,515,165 in the same number of home dates last year—for a drop of 2,131. However, it, too, may run into dwindling attendances in the campaign's second half because of Detroit's sizable lead. The Tigers led by 9½ games going into Thursday night's games.

Wilt Signs 5-Year Contract in NBA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Basketball star Wilt Chamberlain made it official Thursday — he has signed a five-year contract to play with the Los Angeles Lakers in the National Basketball Association.

The announcement, first reported by The Associated Press in Philadelphia last Friday and confirmed Monday by the Philadelphia 76ers, came at an elaborate press conference.

It was held in the Forum, home of the Lakers, in a lengthy session presided over by Jack Kent Cooke, the Lakers' owner.

Neither Cooke nor Chamberlain would divulge details; Cooke only saying, "Wilt Chamberlain is satisfied, and I am particularly satisfied with the financial terms."

The Lakers sent Darrall Imhoff, Archie Clarke and Jerry Chambers, the latter still in the Army, to the 76ers in the deal.

GROPING FOR A SOLUTION

By ARTHUR DALEY

NEW YORK—Tony Kubek has moved gracefully from the role of an active ball player to a commentator on the baseball scene. The threat of a permanent back disability abruptly terminated his career as Yankee shortstop much too soon. Now he follows the diamond sport from a broadcast booth where his observations of the passing scene have assumed a singular pertinency. Like all other baseball men who have spent their adult lives in the sport, Tony is appalled by the complete subjugation of the hitters by the pitchers, especially over the past few seasons. It wasn't that way when he and the other Yankee batsmen carried on the tradition that had been passed on to them by Babe Ruth and others in murderers' row.

Before the dreary All-Star game in Houston the other night, Tony got to talking about this distressing situation, one that is robbing a great sport of its once enormous appeal. He has given it considerable thought and may even have come up with an original solution.

"The game has changed from what it was when I broke in," said Tony. "Modern managers have come up with new strategic concepts. The main difference is that they now platoon their pitchers and there is no way of platooning the hitters. Fresh pitchers keep streaming in. Once upon a time a hitter could adjust to a pitcher after he'd come to bat a couple of times and the pitcher was beginning to tire. Now they get no chance to tire and the hitter has no opportunity to adjust. The game has become one-sided.

"A ball club now has as many as 11 pitchers, maybe even 12. There are four or five starters, a couple of late inning relievers, a couple of middlemen and a few for long relief or extra starts. My idea would be to clamp down a ceiling on the number of pitchers on a squad. If a manager was limited to eight, he wouldn't be so quick with the hook. He would have to conserve what he had, stay with his starters for a longer stretch and thereby give the hitters the break they need.

"Another thing is equipment. I used a comparatively small glove and so did Bobby Richardson. But the gloves most players use today resemble baskets. They're almost like the Cestas used by Jai Alai players. Balls aren't caught in the pocket of the glove. They're trapped in the webbing. Sometimes you wonder how a fielder ever can miss a ball. Reduction in glove size to what it used to be would also help the hitters."

The Kubek suggestions were passed along to Rick Ferrell, Vice-President of the Detroit Tigers and a member of the rules committee.

"They certainly have great merit," said Rick. "Some gloves are monstrosities and even the average glove is far bigger than the ones used only 15 years ago. On his reduction in pitching staffs—well, that rates serious investigation and deliberation.

"At our last meeting we talked about lowering the pitcher's mound from 15 inches to 10. There's a grave psychological disadvantage to a hitter to have one of those giants like Don Drysdale or Ron Reed pouring down fast balls to him from on high.

"Funny thing about mounds. They were not standardized at 15 inches until 1949. Before that, the rule merely said that the maximum could only be 15 inches higher than the base lines. No minimums were specified. So we frequently had the groundskeeper changing the height of the mound from day to day, depending on who was pitching.

"Bobby Feller came overhand with that blazing fast ball and wicked curve. He liked a high mound and got it. Walter Johnson was before my time but he had a terrifying sidearm delivery. It was most effective from a low point. So he pitched from virtual ground level when he was setting strikeout records that probably will never be approached again.

"One year with Washington our four starting pitchers were knuckleball throwers—Dutch Leonard, Roger Wolff, Mickey Haefner and Johnny Niggeling. All the hitters had trouble with them. So did I. I was the catcher. The mound at Griffith Stadium was never more than an inch or two high. They wanted those flutterballs to come dancing up at eye level.

"Whatever the rules committee does, it had better do something soon. The game is getting out of balance."

Seen in Houston were Jumping Joe Dugan and Earle Combs from the famed Murderers' Row of the Yankees. They had a team batting average of .307.

"What's happened to the hitters?" asked the effervescent Dugan agast and alarmed by the decline. "I was the worst hitter on our ball club but in May of 1927 I was batting about .450 and Harry Hellmann of Detroit was hitting .230 or so. I needed him before a game.

"Class will tell," I said. "I hope you've been studying the averages."

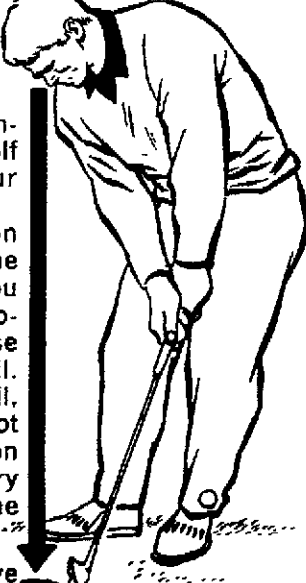

"They're upside down," he said. "I'll bet you a hundred bucks I outhit you by 100 points at the end of the season."

"I did a quick calculation. I figured I'd hit my usual .280 or so, I did. But Hellmann batted .398 that year. Like I said where are the hitters today?" There was no answer.

WATCH FOR THE DIVOT MARK

Head movement on the downswing has ruined many golf shots; don't let it hurt your scores.

When you move your head on the downswing, you alter the path of your clubhead. If you lower your head, you will probably hit fat shots. If you raise your head, you may top the ball.

To help keep your head still, I suggest you look for the divot mark to appear on your iron shots. On woods and putts, try to see the clubface strike the ball.

This simple gimmick will save you many missed shots. It will also put negative thoughts out of your mind by forcing you to concentrate on positive action.

Veterans Banned From Camps

Steelers Urge Rapid Halt to NFL Strike

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steeler veterans, urging an early end to the National Football League strike, said Thursday they supported the players' association but indicated objection to its tactics.

"We believe the word 'strike' is an unnecessary addition to the glossary of the pro football fan's guide," they said in a statement issued by defensive back Paul Martha.

The group—about a dozen veterans living here and several others Martha contacted by telephone—felt that the association was necessary but there was disenchantment with its hard line bargaining.

Some 19 Steeler veterans, including six living in Pittsburgh, were to report Friday at the opening of training camp in Latrobe, Pa.

But NFL owners have banned veterans from camps until the impasse over pensions with the players association is settled.

Martha said he didn't know how many, or if any, of the veterans would try to report Friday with the 33 rookies, but said he wouldn't be surprised if some did. General Manager Dan Rooney said, however, they would be turned away—as were Bart Starr at Green Bay and Roman Gabriel at Los Angeles.

Martha said the group, which met Wednesday night to draft its stand, had discussed the possibility of setting up its own training camp for veterans, as players on some clubs have done, but made no decision. "We are not advocating an emergency camp or succession from the players association," Martha told The Associated Press.

But players indicated it was possible some sort of training camp might be set up if the dispute weren't settled by next week. The bulk of the Pittsburgh Veterans are due in camp July 19.

"I don't think anybody really thought it would go this far," said offensive halfback Dick Hoak, a veteran of seven seasons in the NFL. "I still think it will be settled by the time we report to camp."

Both Dan Rooney and Art Rooney, the club's president, said they never thought the dispute would go as far as it has either, but Art said the owners would not budge.

He said the NFL clubs had gone as far as they could in improving the pension plan and that player demands regarding a pension guarantee for 1970 were not realistic.

"I can not make a commitment for 1970 because you don't know what the situation will be," Art Rooney said, pointing out that the merger of the NFL with the American Football League is to be completed in that year. But he pointed out the owners had promised to make any pension gains in 1970 retroactive to 1968.

Both said they felt the league could exist with just rookies, if it had to.

However, no one, least of all the players, wanted to see that come about.

"We want to be ready, and we want to be in shape," said linebacker Andy Russell. "So it's possible that we might start our own camp—at our own expense... so we can be ready when this is settled. And we all hope that it's resolved."

The text of the group's statement issued by Martha:

"We wholeheartedly support our players association but are deeply concerned about some of the attitudes expressed as a result of the recent discussions between the association and the owners.

"We think it essential that the opportunity be provided for each player to negotiate his own contract in fact, not just in theory. We also consider it important to the game of professional football and the success of each team, that a congenial atmosphere be maintained between the players and the owners.

"We believe the word 'strike' is an unnecessary addition to the glossary of the pro football fan's guide.

"Accordingly, we urge the players association to conclude negotiations as promptly as possible so that we may begin training for the 1968 season."

Packer Veterans Set Up Own Camp

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packer veterans set up their own training camp Thursday, working out at the Promontie High School field while rookies went through their paces under the eye of Coach Phil Bengtson less than two miles away.

Some of the regulars were barred from the Packer camp Wednesday by General Manager Vince Lombardi until the National Football League Players Association decides to permit all regulars to report for training.

About 20 of the 37 experienced players on the club roster participated in Thursday's drill. Quarterback Bart Starr and defensive tackle and end Jim Weatherwax appeared to be in charge.

About 26 rookies drilled on the practice gridiron at Lambeau Field Thursday morning.

Casper Leads British Golf Open at Halfway

CARNOUSTIE, Scotland (AP) — Mild-mannered Bill Casper slew the fable of Carnoustie's invincibility with an explosion of five birdies Thursday and zoomed into a commanding four-stroke lead at the halfway point of the British Open Golf Championship.

The Mormon preacher from San Diego, Calif., leading money winner on U.S. pro tour, matched Ben Hogan's 15-year-old record 68 over the rugged old links beside the North Sea for a 36-hole score of 140.

But he couldn't relax. Strong rallies by the once formidable big three—Jack Nicklaus, Gary Player and Arnold Palmer—posed the threat of a stretch battle.

The burly Nicklaus, a 4-1 pre-tournament favorite, eagled the par five 14th, and finished with a 69 for 145. Player and Palmer both surged back from shaky opening rounds with one-under par 71s to remain in the thick of contention. Player was at 145 and Palmer at 148. Four other Americans, making a total of seven, survived the midway cut when the field was reduced from 130 to the 70 players able to shoot 155 and better.

They were Gay Brewer of Dallas, the 1967 Masters champion, 74-73—147; Hubby Habjan, the surprising club pro from Chicago, 77-74—151; Bert Yancy of Tallahassee, Fla., 78-75—153; and dapper Doug Sanders of Ojai, Calif., who sneaked under the wire with 78-76—154.

Casper's closest pursuers after two days of battling the tricky winds, knotty rough and meandering creeks of the 7,252-yard, par 72 Carnoustie course, were Bob Charles, the left-handed New Zealander who won this title in 1963, and a pair of young English pros, Tony Jacklin and Brian Barnes, tied at 144.

Nicklaus and Player shared the 145 spot with an obscure Irishman named Paddy Sherriff, who had rounds of 72 and 73.

CASPER LEADS AT HALF-WAY MARK

Bill Casper squats down to line up his putt on the second green of the Carnoustie course during the second round of the 1968 British Open Championship in Carnoustie, Scotland. Casper now is out in front at the half-way mark with a four stroke lead after an explosion of five birdies yesterday.

Increase in AFL Pensions Adds Fuel to NFL Dispute

By TED SMITH

Associated Press Sports Editor NEW YORK (AP) — A sharp increase in American Football League pension benefits added fuel to the simmering dispute that has kept veterans out of all National Football League camps and threatens schedule disruptions.

Until now, the two merged leagues have had equal pension plans under which a five-year veteran would receive $500 monthly at 65, a ten-year man $775 and a 15-year man $990.

Agreement has been reached between the AFL Players Association and league owners to increase this to $689 for a five-year man, $1,132 for 10 years, and $1,497 for 15.

Presumably NFL players are asking more, but all negotiations have been behind closed doors and nothing has been revealed beyond the fact that 21 of the 22 players' demands have been met.

Both football pension plans are non-contributory, that is to say, the owners foot the bill.

Before the negotiations started, the NFL players talked of demanding an increase in the owners' contributions to the pension fund from the current $1.4 annually to $5 million.

The owners offered a 25 percent increase in their contributions this year and a similar increase next year.

Under the terms of the merger of the two leagues, the pension plans would be made equal by 1970 when the merger is to be completed. However, the AFL last year brought its pension plan to parity with the NFL.

Football is only now catching up with baseball. A man with five years in the major gets $643 monthly monthly at 65, or if he wishes $250 monthly at 50. A 20-year man gets $1,487 at 65.

Hockey has the highest pension ceiling. A 20-year player in the National Hockey League who waits until 65 to draw a pension gets $1,640 per month.

Hockey also has lower entrance requirements than baseball and football, both of which start at five years. A man with only three years service in the NHL can look forward to $75 monthly at 45 or $46 monthly at 65.

Milwaukee Open Play Real Close

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — Rookie Matt McLendon and Rocky Thompson, looking for his first PGA tour victory, shot six-under-par 66s to share the first-round lead in the $200,000 Greater Milwaukee Open.

Playing under near-perfect conditions on the long, 7,155-yard par 72 North Shore Country Club course, more than 37 golfers shot sub-par rounds.

One stroke behind the leaders at 67 were Dick Lotz, Fred Marty, and another PGA-tour rookie, Rod Horn, of Overland Park, Kan.

Dave Stockton, who won the Cleveland Open two weeks ago, was two strokes off the pace.

Kosygin Blasts Israel During Swedish Visit

STOCKHOLM — Soviet Premier Aleksei N. Kosygin denounced Israel Thursday night at a Swedish government dinner as contributing increasingly to unrest in the Middle East by her delay in withdrawing under the United Nations resolution.

"It is clear today," Kosygin said, "that Israel has decided to keep the territories that it occupied by force." He also said there could be no peaceful settlement in the Middle East until Israel leaves occupied Arab territories.

The Soviet Premier arrived in Stockholm Thursday morning for a three-day visit which has puzzled Swedes as to its motives. Six weeks ago, at a time of upheaval from Eastern Europe to the Far East, Kosygin unexpectedly accepted a three-year old invitation to return the Moscow visit of Premier Tage Erlander.

Thursday, after inspecting milking machines at a rural industrial plant and sharing a lunch of trout and spinach with the workers, the Soviet Premier discussed world problems with Erlander. Thursday night, the government leaders attended a dinner at the Foreign Ministry, located in a downtown square near the opera house.

At the dinner, Kosygin also said, "Today, more than ever, increased efforts are needed by all states actively to stop the American aggression in Vietnam and to remove the obstacles which are now preventing progress during the talks in Paris." Later, he referred specifically to the problem of the bombing of North Vietnam.

Kosygin also smiled on his host when he praised Swedish neutrality as "one of the factors which unconditionally contributes to stabilizing the situation in Europe."

Erlander was benign in his remarks, expressing hopes for an early end to the Vietnam War, praising the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and expressing satisfaction at the prospects of new arms control measures.

Conjecture over what Kosygin might accomplish here was heightened by the presence in Stockholm of Dr. Gunnar Jarring, the U.N. Middle East mediator. It was uncertain whether the two men had had substantive talks during the day.

Jarring was at Arlanda Airport this morning when Kosygin stepped from his L. L. 18 prop-jet after the two-hour flight from Moscow. Following a welcome by a brass band, a guard of honor and a lone Soviet flag, the premier and Erlander drove to Haga Palace.

Haga is a 15-room manor house in a popular public park on the outskirts of Stockholm where the Russian party is staying. The Soviet leader will visit Southern Sweden today, have lunch with King Gustaf VI Adolf and stay overnight at Harpsund, the Swedish Premier's country home. Kosygin will hold a news conference Saturday and return to Moscow that night.

Dagens Nyheter, Stockholm's biggest morning newspaper, asked in an editorial yesterday: "Why is this busy man coming to small insignificant Sweden when the Soviet Union is having one of its dramatic foreign policy experiences for a long time?"

The most accepted explanation was that Kosygin was expressing support for Swedish neutrality and was courting approval from a country that enjoys favorable relations with Eastern Europe. Kosygin was also honoring Erlander two months before the Swedish elections on Sept. 15, when the long-ruling Social Democratic Party faces heavy opposition from a rightist coalition.

Swedish-Soviet relations are without major problems excepting perhaps some nudging for Sweden to recognize East Germany. On the other hand, Swedish-American relations remain edgy over Swedish hospitality to American military deserters and demonstrative public opposition to the war in Vietnam. Such opposition, however, is less strident than in the late winter.

Army-Backed Regime Makes Public Its Proposed New Constitution

ATHENS — Greece's army-backed regime Thursday made public its proposed new constitution, a document that would strip the king of virtually all his powers, increase the authority of the executive, and give the army the task of "protection of the prevailing regime."

The 14-month-old regime's 64-page draft charter was presented at a news conference by Premier George Papadopoulos, who said it would be put to a nationwide vote on Sept. 29.

Under the new draft King Constantine, who fled to exile in Rome seven months ago after his abortive military coup against the Papadopoulos Regime, would return to his throne after the first parliamentary elections. The premier Thursday refused to fix a date for the elections.

There is however a provision that "the government may invite the King to return at an earlier date."

If the King returns, he would find his role a largely decorative one, because he no longer would "appoint and dismiss his ministers" or "command the armed forces" as he had done previously.

The proposed charter limits the King's functions to accepting as premier the choice of Parliament's majority. If Parliament fails to agree, the King may appoint the premier only "after obtaining the opinion of the council of the nation."

This new body will consist of the premier and ex-premiers, parliament's president and party leaders, the presidents of the highest tribunals, the rectors of the three main universities and the defense chief of staff.

The King will require the council's opinion even if he wishes to oust his government, or dismiss Parliament to hold fresh elections.

The king is proclaimed the "symbol of the nation's unity" and his only new privilege is that he may express his discontent over a bill approved by Parliament by refusing to ratify it. But after one month, if the same bill is reapproved by the majority of all members of Parliament, the King must ratify it.

Premier Papadopoulos said Thursday he had "communicated" a copy of this draft to the 28-year-old monarch now in exile in Rome. He did not disclose the King's reaction to it.

The new draft charter creates a new independent estate in Greece: the armed forces. The charter stipulates for the first time that the mission of the armed forces also includes "protection of the prevailing regime and social order from external or internal enemies."

Premier Papadopoulos said the new charter was designed to curb irresponsible individualism and corrupt past political practices. It protects individual rights, including press freedom, but also protects the state from an abuse of them, he said.

No member of Parliament, except the premier and two deputy premiers, can become a cabinet member. Parliament, elected for a five-year term, is to have at most 150 (instead of 300) members of whom at least one-sixth will be appointed—not elected—by the parties in proportion to their electoral strength.

The fate of Greece's pre-revolution politicians under this draft remains in doubt, except for Prof. Andreas Papandreu, who is ousted from Greek politics for life.

One provision bars from elections anyone "who acquired the citizenship of a foreign country, even if he subsequently renounced it," Andreas Papandreu, who now leads an expatriate Greek movement to topple the regime, was a U.S. citizen for 20 years.

Asked whether he planned to free detained political leaders so they could voice their opinion freely, he said the government was considering it.

Two former premiers are under house arrest. They are George Papandreu, octogenarian leader of the Centre Union Party, the former ruling coalition, and father of Andreas Papandreu, and Panayotis Kanellopoulos, head of the rightist National Radical Union. A dozen or more other leading politicians are being held for having made anti-regime statements.

When Papadopoulos, the 48-year-old former colonel who has ruled Greece by martial law for 14 months, was asked whether he planned to lift martial law and grant press freedom for the constitutional plebiscite, he compared Greece with a patient in a plaster cast.

"We are trying to see if the patient can walk with the plaster cast," he said. "We break the original cast and limit the new one to wherever this is necessary. Eventually the plebiscite will be a general test of the patient's abilities. Let us pray he will need the plaster cast no more. For, if necessary, we can clamp it on him again."

Heart Seizure Caused Crash

SUDBURY, Ont. (AP) — A heart seizure suffered by the pilot was ruled as the cause of a June 12 plane crash that killed four men, two of them from Elk County, Pa.

A coroner's jury ruled Wednesday on the death of Robert G. Griffin, 31, of Minden, Ont., who piloted the Cessna 180 that crashed near Westree, Ont.

The passengers, also killed in the crash were Ivan Smith, 30, Ancaster, Ont.; Richard Polonski, 47, and Francis G. Oliver 34, both of Wilcox, Pa.

Griffin had not shown previous evidence of heart trouble.

Gown Takes Trip

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Miss South Africa's psychedelic evening gown took a trip Thursday—right out of the Miss Universe Pageant.

A top pageant official said the gown's revelations were extreme.

The audience of 2,100 at evening gown judging Wednesday night gasped when 19-year-old Monica Fairall pirouetted at the head of the runway. The back of her sequined gown was cut as far below the waist as the law allows, even lower than her backless bathing suit.

With advice from the reigning Miss Universe and strong persuasion from pageant officials, the 135-pound Miss South Africa decided her brand new gown must go.

Monica wept when she came off stage after her gown's debut. The stunning dress which reached from chin to floor in front had arrived by mail only hours before from South Africa, where a dressmaker hand-tailored $400 worth of material to her 35-24-35 curves.

"When everybody roared when I turned about, I thought either they liked it or they must be shocked," she said Thursday. "I guessed it was a little of both but I don't think it would be a good idea to wear it again. I didn't have any idea people would react like that."

"It made quite a sensation and I can't repeat that or the judges might think I was pushing myself on them," said the 5-foot-9 student from Durban. "What will my mother say?"

Herbert K. Landon, executive director of the Miss Universe Pageant, said, "It's not within the context of our pageant that anything too extreme be worn. That's in the same context of the rule that they don't wear artificial padding in the swimsuits."

"I asked her if she had another gown," Landon said. "She said she had one and I said, 'Then wear the other dress.'"

Two-Price Gold System Meeting Expectations

WASHINGTON (AP) — After almost four months of operation, the two-price gold system which stopped wild speculation in the precious metal and ended a worldwide crisis is living up to the expectations of its U.S. backers.

They voice confidence the system can work indefinitely. No changes have been made in the gold agreement since it went into effect in mid-March although some governments are now discussing the possibility of future sales by South Africa both in the private market and to governments.

A firm decision—if one ever comes—is still months away. Any such plan undoubtedly would be geared to strengthen the two-price system, not to weaken it.

In an agreement last March 17, the United States and her six European gold partners shut off the frenzied gold buying in Europe by refusing to feed any more government gold into the private market.

Since 1962, they had supplied all the gold needed in the prirate London market to hold the price at $35 an ounce—the basis of the present world money system.

By abolishing this gold pool, they set up a two-price system—one price governed by the law of supply and demand and the other of $35 an ounce for buying and selling among governments.

The nations agreed to freeze the amount of gold in government hands by refusing to buy any of the private market and to buy and sell only among themselves.

At the same time, the United States served notice it would sell no gold to any nation which sought a quick profit on the free market and then attempted to replenish its supply at $35 an ounce from the United States.

U.S. officials said there's every indication thus far that all nations have lived up to the agreement reached by the United States, United Kingdom, Belgium, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Switzerland.

They asked other nations to cooperate.

University Horseshoeing Course Very Popular

(EDITOR'S NOTE: You won't get an academic degree for learning how to shoe a horse, but Pennsylvania State University is lifting the old Village Smithy from the shade of the elm tree onto a pedestal of respectability. Here's a report.

By R. G. FREEMAN
UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP) — For the past three years, people from many walks of life have been learning how to make a four-footed animal's walk through life more comfortable.

Dentists, mechanics, a male model, truck drivers, teachers and college students have been among the 169 students who successfully completed Pennsylvania State University's summer course in horseshoeing.

With 150 applicants for this summer, the course has split into two sessions, running from July 29 to August 9, and August 12 to 23rd. There also will be an "advanced" course for post-graduates on Aug. 10.

Those enrolled in the course are not blacksmiths. They are for the most part equine enthusiasts or professionals—horseowners who want to give their animal's feet that personal touch, or horse trainers eager to expand knowledge of their trade.

What the students will be learning, basically, is how to fit what most people are used to throwing at a stake on to the fibrous foot of a horse. And, according to the Penn State professor who oversees the program, shoeing a horse is not as easy as skinning a cat.

"Endurance and finesse is necessary, and a person has to be in good physical condition," said Dr. Thomas L. Merritt, associate professor of animal science and director of the course.

"What we aim to do here," said Dr. Merritt, "is to teach the basic skills and fundamentals and to provide the opportunity for practicing these skills."

Toward this end, the 10-day course divides into several stages. First, students are taught about the anatomy and physiology of a horse's foot.

"If they understand these things, then they can understand some of the principles of putting shoes on, which some blacksmiths do not understand," said Dr. Merritt.

Then the students shoe their first foot—but only one. They are given disembodied feet donated by a slaughterhouse. Presumably, these appendages are easier to manage than if they were attached to a 1,200 pound animal.

The students trim these feet with a "rasp" or special file. Then, taking a piece of straight steel, an anvil, a forge and a hammer, they shape their first horse shoe to tack on to the dead foot. It is important, Dr. Merritt emphasized, that the shoe be made to fit the foot. Otherwise, the horse suffers.

The third stage of the course permits students to shoe their first live animal at the Hanover Shoe Farm in Hanover.

The students spend a week on the farm, where they work with five horses, or 20 feet. They are taught how to make corrective shoes as well as shoes for everyday wear.

Why do horses, alone among four-footed animals, wear shoes?

"Horses must wear shoes for protection of their feet," Dr. Merritt explained. "If they are on hard surfaces their feet wear away faster. A secondary reason is to correct some fault in structure, attempt to make a horse move truer and straighter."

The men who apply the shoes—known as blacksmiths for reasons no one seems to be certain about—are now in short supply. There is no count of the number of professionals in Pennsylvania, which does not license blacksmiths.

THE 31ST ANNUAL HILL CUMORAH PAGEANT—with a cast of 450—will once again fill the hills near Palmyra, N.Y., about 25 miles southeast of Rochester. Garbed in authentic costumes of ancient times, and playing against a natural backdrop, the cast will present the recreation of a chronicle of long ago, based on the Book of Mormon. 'Tis said to be held in the exact spot where the Angel Moroni led young Joseph Smith to the golden plates of the Book of Mormon in 1823. The colorful spectacular is made even more so, according to information received, by special effects created by multi-colored lights, lightning flashes, thunder roars and the realism of smoke. The Mormon pageant will be presented from July 20th through August 3rd—Just take the New York Thruway and get off at Exit 43—The pageant can be seen free, with no charge for either seating or parking. Performances begin at 9 p.m.

Ann Landers

Answers Your Problems

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My husband retired two years ago at age 60. Mike was an avid golfer and looked forward to retirement so he could play as much golf as he wanted. But soon after his 60th birthday he developed a little arthritis in one arm. The doctor said he could still play golf but Mike refused to try. A few months later he suffered a slight stroke. For two years he has done nothing but look at TV, drink and feel sorry for himself.

My once good life is now hell. Mike wants me to wait on him hand and foot. If he were totally incapacitated I'd gladly do it. But he could do many things for himself if he tried.

When I return from a bridge game he accuses me of being with men. He threatens to kill himself and "get out of my way." I sometimes think he is resentful that I have good health and he does not.

What should I do? If I stay home day and night I'll go crazy. Before his illness Mike was never an arguer. Now he picks a fight and keeps it going for hours. I need help. — N. Y. DILEM-MA

DEAR N.Y.: Have you discussed Mike's behavioral changes with his doctor? If you haven't, you should. Sometimes when an active man retires he becomes depressed and cantankerous but what you describe suggests that "slight stroke" may have produced a little brain damage. Make an appointment with Mike's doctor today. It could change your thinking considerably.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: You could do a lot of good in this world if you weren't so doggedly rock-headed. In the last year you printed letters from three women who sounded great. I wrote and asked for their names and addresses and got three flat turn-downs. Why? Don't you know there are a lot of lonesome people in this world who can't afford to go to nice places and meet high-class folks? These people need help. A column where readers tell about themselves is a perfect place to make connections.

I've been married four times. (The first two don't count because I was too young to know better). I have finally learned how to treat a woman now that I am older. Life would be rosy if I had a lovely wife by my side. Why don't you be a good egg and put me in touch with either "Blues In The Night," "Ready And Able," or "Lonely Louise"? — MUSCLES MIKE

DEAR MIKE: You say you are a four-time loser and now if you had a good woman by your side life would be rosy. That's some recommendation, Buddy Boy. Find "Rosy" on your own.

Strangers can be dangerous and, oftentimes, the nicer they seem the nuttier they are. I want no part of friend-finding.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 16, I have a driver's license and I am a very good driver but my parents will not allow me to drive by myself. What good is a driver's license if I can't drive without a chaperone?

My dad says the only reason they let me get a license is so I'd get off their backs.

I keep telling them I need the experience of driving alone but they won't listen. Last week I drove the family six times. If they didn't think I was a safe driver they would not have driven with me, would they?

Please give me some help. — C.H.

DEAR C.H.: Be patient, Chicken, your time will come. Continue to display competence at the wheel and stop begging. When you beg you sound like a small child and small children should not be driving cars.

Barrett-Nasman Vows Are Pledged In Topsfield, Mass.

Our Savior Evangelical Lutheran Church in Topsfield, Mass., was the setting for the double ring wedding service which united in marriage Shirley Anne Barrett and Thomas Edward Nasman recently. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Barrett of Rabbit road, Salisbury, Mass., and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Nasman of RD No. 1, Russell.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore an Empire gown of white satin with scoop neckline and scalloped sleeves and train. A pearled heart-shaped headresser secured her bouffant shoulder length veil and she carried a cascade of white baby carnations and stephanotis.

The maid of honor, Miss Hazel Caldwell of Hanover, N. H., wore a light green gown and carried a yellow floral cascade of baby carnations. Bridesmaids, Mrs. Grace Smith, sister of the bride, and Miss Gretchen Nasman, sister of the groom, wore gowns of light yellow and carried cascades of green baby carnations.

The best man was Jerry Rasmussen of Cleveland, Ohio, and ushers were Joel Wilson of Warren and James Young of Salisbury, Mass.

The mother of the bride chose a then aqua suit and matching accessories, and the mother of the groom chose a gown of turquoise lace with white accessories. Both had orchid corsages. Mrs. Lillian Lewis, grandmother of the bride, and Mrs. Gwenneth Rhinehart, grandmother of the groom, were also remembered with corsages.

A reception was held in the Sportsman Lodge in Newburyport, Mass. Highlight of the decorative touches was the wedding cake made by the bride's mother.

The brother of the bride, James Barrett, arrived home on leave from Thailand in time for the wedding ceremony. He is in the United States Air Force.

For traveling on a wedding trip to Daytona Beach, Florida, the new Mrs. Nasman wore a beige suit with navy blue accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Nasman are now residing at 3750 Lake avenue, Apt. 6, Rochester, N. Y.

The bride is a graduate of Amesbury High School, Amesbury, Mass., 1961, and a 1964 graduate of Mary Hitchcock Memorial Hospital; she is a Registered Nurse. The groom is a 1960 graduate of Warren Area High School and a 1965 graduate of Cleveland State University, B.E.S. He is now employed by Eastman Kodak Company in Rochester.

Pre-nuptial affairs were given by Anne Morris and Judy Sosey; Grace Smith. The rehearsal dinner was given by Mr. and Mrs. Nasman, parents of the groom.

Guests were present at the wedding from Warren, Kane, Tidoute, Barnes, Philadelphia and Erie, Penna.; Cleveland, Ohio; Hartford, Conn.; Galveston, Texas; and, Hanover, N.H.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE

Here's how I made temporary sleeping bags for my two boys

I folded old shower curtains in half lengthwise putting the top edge at the bottom. This gave a double row of metal-reinforced holes which I laced together with heavy string. The open long side I closed by making eyelets and lacing it also with the heavy string. This makes a large plastic envelope closed on three sides to put the folded blankets in. The plastic on the bottom keeps out ground moisture and the plastic on the top holds in body heat. (Be sure to leave enough space at the top of the laced long side to make getting in easy.)

If you don't have an old shower curtain, a heavy quilted plastic closet garment bag is even easier.

Just cut the top section on three sides leaving it attached along one wider side. (This flap serves as a place to lay a pillow without putting it directly on the ground.) Then open the side zipper and just slide in the blankets.

These temporary bags are great when the children just want to camp out in the back yard for a night or two. And they cost you nothing.

Charlotte Minnette

You're a peach to share that one with us, Charlotte. Thanks oodles. Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE

Our little boys love to throw sand and dirt in each others hair when playing in the sand-pile.

Well, finally I've hit on an easy removal method.

I just use the vacuum cleaner with the round brush attachment and it sucks all the grit off while the hair is still dry.

You'll still have to wash their heads, but you're not grinding the dirt in their scalps or all over the house 'til the job gets done.

Besides, they think it's fun to have their head vacuumed! Judy

Clarke-Taylor Nuptials Are Solemnized In Alaska

Miss Barbara Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clarke of Wasilla, Alaska, and Mr. Robert (Chip) Taylor, formerly of Sugar Grove, were married recently in a candle-light ceremony in the United Protestant Church, Palmer, Alaska. The Rev. Richard Maden officiated at the wedding service.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a traditional wedding gown of peau de soie and Chantilly lace. The lace covered bodice was finished with a square scalloped neckline and tapered sleeves coming to wedding points at the wrists; a gracefully full hoop skirt had panels of the lace. Her long train of peau de soie also was lace bordered. The bride's elbow length veil was bouffant style and she carried a small bouquet of red roses on a white ribbon.

Miss Cheryl Clarke, sister of the bride, was the maid of honor, and Mrs. Dick Webb of Fairbanks, Alaska, a high school and college classmate, was the bridesmaid. Both wore similar pink and blue gowns. The best man was Joseph McAlister of Wasilla, and the groomsman was Dick Webb of Fairbanks. Ushers were James Huston of Wasilla and Morton Blissard of Palmer.

Following the ceremony, the couple was honored at a reception at the VFW hall in Wasilla.

The mother of the bride wore a pink crepe dress with a pink lace coat and pink accessories. The groom's mother chose a blue dress with blue and white accessories.

After a wedding trip to Pennsylvania, where they will visit members of the groom's family, the couple will be at home in the Palmer-Wasilla area.

Mrs. Taylor will teach music in the Wasilla schools and Mr. Taylor will resume his position as music teacher in the Palmer schools.

DEAR HELOISE

When we go on vacation with the children, we take along a zippered plastic pillow cover to put the soiled clothes in. I put opened cakes of soap into the bag to keep it fresh smelling.

For driving snacks we find that carrot and celery strips are satisfying and certainly much better for the children than candy or cookies. We soak the vegetables in ice cubes overnight, drain them in the morning, and put them in a plastic container.

DEAR HELOISE

I was looking through my cabinet for a small deep pan to bake a peach cobbler in when I spied an old aluminum ice tray that I did not use in the refrigerator any longer.

So I used it and it was just the right size and depth. Worked great for me. Ruby Davis

Despite East's repeated attempts to communicate with his partner, West was clearly not tuned in on the same wave length and they suffered a disastrous setback on the deal.

North opened the bidding with one diamond and East overcalled with one heart. South contented himself with a simple forcing response of two clubs and North rebid two no trump.

East now showed his second suit by bidding three diamonds. East's call convinced South that North did not have the bulk of his values in the diamond suit and, in an effort to obtain more information, South showed a feature by cue bidding the ace of spades.

When North revealed his club support by returning to four clubs, the latter decided to dally no further and proceeded directly to six clubs. This bid was passed around to East who doubted if his partner led a spade, he could ruff with his small trump and the ace of clubs would then score the setting trick.

The double of a slam bid is conventionally employed to secure an unusual lead. Inasmuch as East had bid both diamonds and hearts, he was hoping to tout his partner off the normal lead of one of his suits. By a process of elimination, West might, therefore, be induced to make the desired spade opening.

Unfortunately for East, the situation was complicated somewhat by the fact that North had also bid diamonds. Inasmuch as the slam double convention provides, as a first preference, the lead of dummy's first bid suit, West decided that East's three diamond call had been a strategic maneuver to secure a diamond lead. He, therefore, opened a diamond and the defense quickly succumbed. Declarer discarded a spade on the ace of diamonds, drew trump after driving out the ace and claimed his slam.

Jonathan Bolt Featured In Cast of 'Generation'

A well-heeled advertising man from Chicago arrives in New York to visit his daughter and her husband of two days in their studio-loft apartment. He learns that he is about to become an instant grandfather and that his iconoclastic son-in-law plans to deliver the baby himself because he distrusts doctors. Thus begins "Generation", which opened last evening (Thursday), and which can be seen again Saturday evening at 8:30 in Chautauqua's Norton Hall.

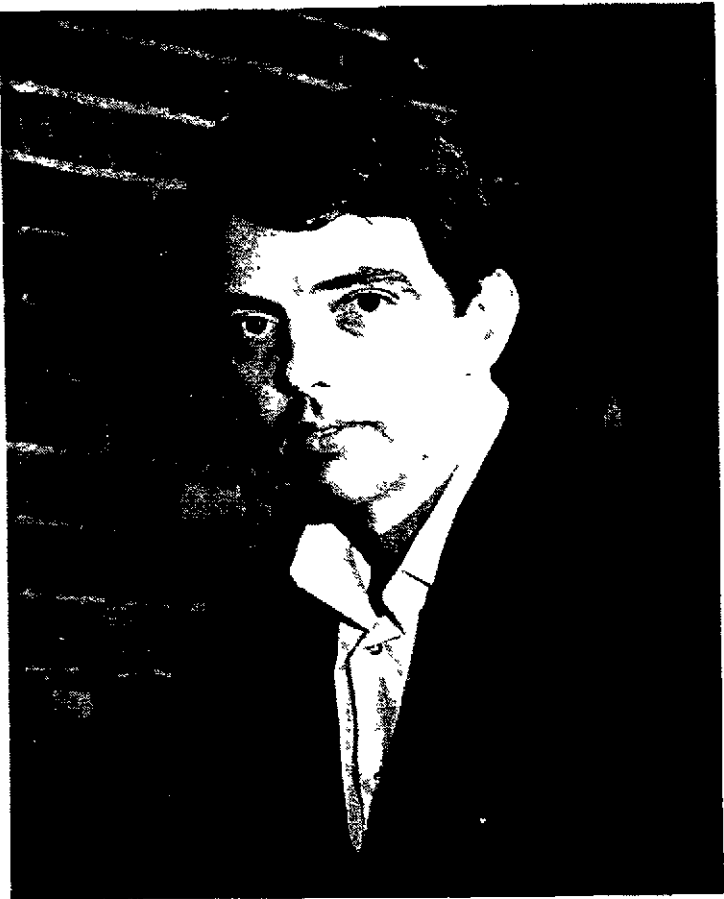

The heartwarming comedy by William Goodhart deals with adjustment to marriage — only this time it's the bride's father who does most of the adjusting. In the perennial tug of war between generations, he clashes head on with the young husband — a decidedly noncommercial photographer, poet, guitarist, folk singer, furniture maker, and — of course — a do-it-yourself obstetrician.

Richard Oberlin portrays the role of the distraught father, who considers himself an expert but learns a thing or two not only about the younger generation but about himself as well.

Larry Tarrant directs "Generation". His cast includes Jonathan Bolt (pictured) as the far-out son-in-law, Gigi Gibson as the very pregnant bride, Robert Allman as a doctor, Allen Leatherman as a company lawyer, and Bob Moak as a hyperthyroid magazine editor.

The humor and the compassion of "Generation" delighted audiences from coast to coast. The New York Journal American called it "the season's runaway comedy success" and the Los Angeles Times hailed it as "a marvel of a play: rich, warm, hilarious."

The second production of the season opens Thursday, July 18 with Tennessee Williams' humorous and poignant drama "The Rose Tattoo" with Evie McElroy in the role of Serafina.

Interstate Human Blood Plasma Shipping Halted

(C) N.Y. Times News Service WASHINGTON — The government has asked processors of whole pooled human blood plasma to stop shipping it in interstate commerce because of the risk of hepatitis.

The action followed a report in April from the National Research Council, that recommended that the use of whole pooled blood plasma be "discouraged and even discontinued" because of the hepatitis danger.

The report said a major study has shown that one patient in ten who receives whole pooled blood plasma transfusions gets hepatitis, a potentially serious virus disease.

It is estimated that about 300,000 units of the pooled plasma have been used yearly in the United States. The government request is expected to shut off most of that use.

Plasma is the fluid portion of the blood—the portion that remains after the blood cells and other formed elements have been removed. Whole pooled plasma is plasma pooled from the contributions of many donors. It is given in treating burn patients; as a blood volume expander for the seriously injured and for other purposes including general transfusion use.

The action to halt major use of whole pooled plasma was taken in May following discussions with the ten processors licensed to produce it for interstate use. The division of biological standards of the national institutes of health requested the processors to stop sending the plasma interstate after June 15.

The licenses that have permitted the ten to do so will be

Strikers To Meet With Mediators

STEBENVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Representatives of striking Ohio Power Co. employees will begin meeting Saturday with a federal mediator in an effort to end a two-week-old work stoppage.

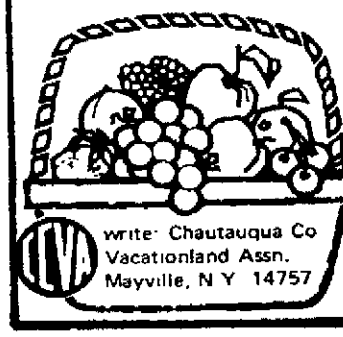

The mediator H. J. Motoney, said Thursday he has scheduled meetings Saturday in Zanesville with members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and will meet here Tuesday with Utility Workers Union representatives.

The two unions, together with members of the Electric Service Union, began striking June 28, idling about 1,400 workers. The dispute is over new contracts.

Six of the utility's nine divisions are affected by the strike — Steubenville, Canton, Coshocton, Tiffin, Findlay and Lima.

North Vietnam, Chinese Solidarity Reaffirmed

(C) N. Y. Times News Service HONG KONG—High officials of North Vietnam and Communist China have reaffirmed continued solidarity between their two countries.

Professions of mutual regard and support were exchanged in Peking Wednesday night by North Vietnam's Vice Premier Le Thanh Nghi and China's Vice Premier Li Hsien-Nien and were taken by China analysts here Thursday to mean Hanoi and Peking continue to maintain cooperative, if not completely harmonious, relations.

The Peking declarations, relayed here by Hsinhua, the Chinese Communist Press Agency, served to discount reports of strain between the Chinese and Vietnamese Communists based on indications the Chinese dis-

He said the Chinese people "will extend more effective support to the revolutionary struggle of the fraternal Vietnamese people." He added that "any attempt to alienate China and Vietnam will definitely fail."

Nghi responded by citing a statement attributed to President Ho Chi-Minh of North Vietnam that Vietnam and China are brothers and asserting that relations between the Vietnamese and Chinese peoples were now closer "against the most dangerous common enemy, U.S. imperialism."

Li also gave oblique expression to Peking's opposition to a compromise by the North Vietnamese with the U.S., as Peking spokesmen have done frequently since the Paris talks began. Li expressed confidence in "final victory" by the Vietnamese on the basis of their "persisting in a protracted war."
